this work advances a theory of deliberation about the goals projects and values that constitute a good or worthwhile life for a person the central argument begins with the assumption that the concerns most people have in this kind of deliberation are to discover which goals are worth pursuing or which ends worth valuing given those features of ourselves that we find important on reflection and choose our goals and values in such a way that our choices can bear our reflective scrutiny holiness is the attribute most emphatically ascribed to god in scripture but there has been little attention devoted to characterizing and considering the entailments of divine holiness in divine holiness and divine action mark c murphy defends an account of holiness indebted to rudolf otto s description of the experience of the holy as that of a mysterium tremendum et fascinans god s being holy consists in god s being someone with whom intimate union is both extremely desirable for us and yet something for which we and indeed any limited beings are unfit this notion of divine holiness is useful for addressing disputed theological questions regarding divine action in contrast to standard accounts of divine action that begin with assumptions regarding god s moral perfection or god s maximal love the appeal to divine holiness supports a rival framework for explaining and predicting divine action the holiness framework according to which god is motivated to act in ways that are a response to god s own value by keeping distance from that which is deficient defective or in any way limited in goodness this study exhibits the fruitfulness of a reorientation from the morality and love frameworks to the holiness framework by showing how such a reorientation suggests distinct approaches to perennial problems of divine action regarding creation incarnation atonement and salvation from the treatment of these perennial problems a general theme regarding divine action emerges that god s interaction with the world exhibits a radical sort of humility
